Everyday Equality
Our strategy 2017–2022
We’re Scope
We won’t stop until we achieve a society where all disabled people enjoy equality and fairness

That itself is nothing new. Scope has always been about making change happen. We know that our quality information and advice, personalised services and influential campaigns mean that more disabled people can lead the lives they choose.

But life today is much harder for disabled people than it needs to be. Disabled people have told us that the challenges they face are changing. So we’re changing to meet those challenges with them. If we don’t, we won’t be in a place to support disabled people to realise their ambitions in the future.

Our strategy is underpinned by detailed and robust plans that will achieve our mission of everyday equality. We will be a truly mission-led organisation relevant to the lives of millions of disabled people, available when disabled people need us most.

We have ambitious plans for the next five years. We want to raise expectations when it comes to disability. To do this we’re going to focus on the priorities disabled people tell us matter most, supporting them to get the best start in life, live the life they choose and be financially secure.

We want to harness the power of digital technology to improve lives and reach many more disabled people, to offer the information they need, be better connected and in control.

We want disabled people and others to come together to kickstart campaigns. Challenge attitudes. Influence decision makers. Shape the world around them.

To achieve greater impact Scope must focus. We completed the transfer of our regulated and day services in April 2018 to Salutem Healthcare who are committed to their long term development. This included the transfer of 1,600 staff.

We want disabled people to have fairness and equality – at home, at work, at school and in our communities. Disabled people will remain at the heart of everything we do.

We are proud of what we have achieved and excited about the future. We will be a bold and collaborative force to bring about positive, lasting change. And we look forward to working with you to make that happen.

This strategy is the start of an important journey for Scope. It is a clear statement of how we are going to realise change so that disabled people enjoy equality and fairness.

Introduction

Peter Crowne
Interim Chief Executive

Andrew McDonald
Chair

We want disabled people to have fairness and equality – at home, at work, at school and in our communities. Disabled people will remain at the heart of everything we do.

We are proud of what we have achieved and excited about the future. We will be a bold and collaborative force to bring about positive, lasting change. And we look forward to working with you to make that happen.

This strategy is the start of an important journey for Scope. It is a clear statement of how we are going to realise change so that disabled people enjoy equality and fairness.

Introduction

Peter Crowne
Interim Chief Executive

Andrew McDonald
Chair
Our values set the tone for how we work together, how we behave and how we make decisions.

Pioneering

We are passionate. We make things happen and lead the way. We are curious, abandoning assumptions and pushing boundaries. We innovate to find new solutions and always strive for better. We expect a lot of ourselves and each other, but we are confident – proud of our work and focussed on the impact we can have.

Courageous

We are passionate. We make things happen and lead the way. We are curious, abandoning assumptions and pushing boundaries. We innovate to find new solutions and always strive for better. We expect a lot of ourselves and each other, but we are confident – proud of our work and focussed on the impact we can have.

Connected

Working together our passion, knowledge and experience will create a fairer society for disabled people. We make it our business to connect – internally and externally – to collaborate and form alliances. We listen. We pull the best minds together, tapping into the expertise and imagination of the right people.

Open

It’s a mind-set. We are open to ideas, and to each other. We are transparent about what we do and how we do it; building trust internally and with our customers and supporters. We create supportive, accessible environments where everyone has a voice and people feel confident to speak up. Our openness means we can achieve more and achieve more quickly.

Fair

We are the change we seek, passionate about making sure all have a fair chance, the opportunities we all deserve. And this is how we work at Scope, valuing, respecting and supporting each other, our diversity, our skills and our expertise. We all take responsibility. We ask a lot of ourselves and each other and we support each other to succeed.

“The attitude of too many people is that disability issues are all about benefits and illness”

Cath, disability advocate
We help disabled children get the best start in life. We support disabled people to lead the lives they choose. But life is still much harder for disabled people than it needs to be.

But too often disabled people can’t access the support they need at home, in education or at work, and face negative attitudes, unnecessary extra costs and huge pressures on family life.

So we’re making a choice to change too. We want to support disabled people to realise their ambitions. We will focus on having the greatest impact on the lives of disabled people.

There is still much more to do. To challenge injustice, change attitudes and ensure disabled people have a stronger voice to influence change at home and across society.

We will redesign our information, advice and support to reach millions of disabled people and have the greatest impact on their lives.

We will be bold in challenging government and businesses to tackle inequality. We will change attitudes so that disabled people can fulfil their aspirations.

The challenges disabled people face are changing. Disabled people today have greater ambitions for life and expect to be treated equally.

There’s a long way to go to improve attitudes and awareness. We need to challenge injustice, change attitudes and ensure disabled people have a stronger voice to influence change at home and across society.

Building on change

Scope research shows that:

- Over a third of the British public have avoided talking to disabled people for fear of saying the wrong thing.
- Over half of disabled people have worried about sharing information about their impairment or condition with an employer.
- Four in 10 parents said their disabled children ‘rarely’ or ‘never’ have the opportunity to socialise and mix with children who are not disabled.
- One in four disabled people said they feel valued by society.
- Disabled people are almost twice as likely to be unemployed as non-disabled people.
- On average, disabled people spend £570 a month on disability related costs.
- One in four disabled people said they feel valued by society.
- Disabled people are almost twice as likely to be unemployed as non-disabled people.
- On average, disabled people spend £570 a month on disability related costs.

6

7

“There’s a long way to go to improve attitudes and awareness”

Felix, supported by Scope
By 2022 we will be the go-to organisation for disability, directly reaching 2 million people with information, advice and support. By 2022 we will be driving change for many of the 14 million disabled people in the UK so their ambitions aren’t limited by attitudes or policy and they can lead the lives they choose.

We have ambitious plans for the next five years.

To help us develop this strategy, we listened to disabled people, their families, our supporters and Disabled People’s Organisations to ask them where we should focus in the next five years. It was important to have conversations with people who matter to us so we could build a strategy that tackles the challenges and issues they told us they face.

We will work in partnership with disabled people, government, businesses, partners and the public to make change happen.

We will deliver social change by influencing policy, attitudes and markets, and by offering information, advice and support to disabled people and their families.

We will:

– Build a community of disabled people who support each other and share experiences, advice and tips to guide one another through life’s big moments. By the end of 2018/19 we plan to secure 40,000 community members.
– Harness the power of digital technology and reach many more disabled people to offer the information they need, and improve lives through assistive technology and better access to products and platforms.
– Be the go-to organisation for 2 million people who need information, advice and support at times when it matters most.
– Diversify our income streams through fundraising, partnerships and our shops so that we have a sustainable voluntarily-funded base, and powerful network of supporters to collaborate with to drive change.

We will:

– Develop a robust evidence base through 12 pioneering research projects on extra costs, attitudes, families, and technology that will tell a compelling story about the reality of disabled people’s lives and the need for change.
– Run two major campaigns each year to inspire government, businesses and the public to change policy, practice and attitudes. In 2019 we will campaign for a minister for disabled children and families and help businesses to design new technology inclusively.
– Offer over 60 quality services disabled people tell us they need in a way that suits them – from support through our national helpline to tailored employment advice, and from access to practical tools and guides to personalised emotional support.

Everyday equality is about ensuring we all have an equal chance in life. Not feeling inferior, not being treated unfairly, not being overlooked because of who we are. It’s about fairness, justice and rights – at home, at school, at work and in our communities.

Disabled people tell us that everyday equality can’t be achieved without a steady income enough to pay the bills and cope with unexpected events. For many, but not all disabled people, it’s about having a job.

It’s about feeling strong enough to cope with the hard times. It’s about knowing how to get support and getting that support when it’s most needed, in a way that suits you. It’s about finding others who are in the same boat, not feeling alone. It’s about going to school, feeling safe, having friends, going out and enjoying life. It’s about feeling independent, confident and connected.

Looking ahead

What is everyday equality?
Our work for 2017 – 2022
Scope will support disabled people to
Get the best start in life

Goal: Fulfil my potential during my early years
Scope will improve opportunities for disabled children and the resilience of their families by:
- Increasing financial security so that families face fewer extra costs.
- Challenging attitudes and barriers that limit opportunities and ensuring disabled children and their families access the support and information they need to live the life they choose.
- Increasing emotional resilience so that families can overcome challenges in the early years.

Goal: Fulfil my potential during transition to adulthood
Scope will ensure disabled young people have the same opportunities as everyone else by:
- Increasing access to early and tailored support, information and advice.
- Supporting more young disabled people to move into work.
- Challenging attitudes and barriers that limit young people’s potential.

So, what will we do?
Launch the Disability Price Tag calculation in 2018, to measure the extra costs families of disabled children face and track the impact this has on their opportunities year on year.
Open 15 parenting services and 11 sleep services in the next five years in London, Birmingham, Cardiff, Manchester and Leeds, to help build emotional resilience and happier families.
In 2018 we will campaign to improve families’ experience at diagnosis and support for disabled children in the early years.
Provide a platform for disabled role models to shift attitudes that limit young people’s potential in the run up to the Paralympic Games in 2020.

I worry every day about Elise’s future. I worry that when she’s at the age where she knows what’s going on, that she’ll want to join in but she can’t.”

Christie, mum to Elise

Our work for 2017 – 2022
Scope will support disabled people to
Live the life they choose

Goal: Live the life I choose
Scope will ensure all disabled people are able to live the life they choose by:
- Widening access to care and support and ensuring it is better tailored to individual need so that disabled people can live independently and fulfil personal aspirations.
- Increasing disabled people’s power and influence so they are empowered to make decisions about their lives and make change in communities.
- Harness the potential of digital technology so that disabled people can live more independently.

So, what will we do?
Each year we will support young disabled people to become campaign leaders through Scope for Change.
Campaign so that social care, transport and other support services better enable disabled people to be independent, confident and connected to their friends and family.
Run the Big Hack in 2019, our digital influencing programme to ensure future digital technology is designed inclusively so it meets disabled consumers needs.
Run local influencing programmes starting in 2020 to inform a spectacular campaign in the run up to the General Election in 2022.

“I was simply told that I would have to make the best of things and that I would be fed the following day”

Ricky, Student
Our work for 2017 – 2022
Scope will support disabled people to Be financially secure

Goal: Have the opportunity to work
Scope will work to reduce the gap between the percentage of disabled people and non-disabled people in work by:

- Ensuring disabled people get voluntary, tailored and joined-up support so they get in, stay in and progress in work.

- Improving workplace policies, practice and culture so that disabled employees are better supported at work and experience improved attitudes in the workplace.

- Changing attitudes, promoting ambition and fostering a culture where disabled people can be open about what they need to succeed at work.

“I went to many interviews, but nothing ever came from them… Then there was my worst fear: what if my disability was the problem?”
Becca, Scope for Change campaigner

Goal: Have a decent standard of living
Scope will tackle the financial penalty associated with disability by:

- Reducing the extra costs disabled people face particularly in relation to everyday goods and services such as energy and telecommunications.

- Tackling the digital divide and empowering disabled consumers to use digital technology so they are able to access online tools and offers that bring down the cost of living.

- Ensuring disabled people receive the financial support they need for a decent standard of living.

“Disabled people have a lot to offer the world of work, and I genuinely believe that the world of work has a lot to offer us in return”
Abbi, disability advocate

So, what will we do?
Launch 14 employment services in the next five years to provide highly personalised support for disabled people to find, apply for and progress in work.

Work in partnership with Virgin Media to launch Support to Work in 2017, an online national employment service providing tailored information so disabled people have the skills to apply for a job and stay in work.

Launch Inclusive Workplace Network in 2018/19, a membership programme aimed at helping organisations improve practice and become great employers of disabled people.

Influence policy makers and businesses to drive down the cost of everyday goods and energy from 2020–2022.

“Making an impact

We have developed a theory of change to ensure our actions, and how it influences people to behave differently, deliver the social change we wish to see.

The golden threads of our theory of change will inform all we do. It will keep our focus on the issues that matter and have the greatest impact possible.

It’s not just about reaching many more people at moments that matter. It’s also about making a big difference, for a lifetime.

We will:

- Track progress nationally using national surveys, population-level data and our own data to measure the long term impact of our work.

- Build a strong evidence base of economic, statistical and qualitative research to tell the story of what it’s like to be disabled in Britain today and show what needs to change.

- Use customer insight and data to improve our services, strengthen our influence and keep focus on what will make the biggest difference to disabled people.

- Track changes in 80 disabled people’s lives over five years in a groundbreaking research project, Our Lives Our Journey, to inform our future work.

- Collect and share information about outcomes for disabled people from our services and campaigns to ensure we make the greatest impact.

- Measure our reach and engagement to make sure we have the scale we need to make an impact for the 1 in 5 of us who are disabled.

- Allocate resources based on impact performance and report openly to our supporters on the progress we are making towards everyday equality for disabled people.

And we won’t stop until we get there.

“I went to many interviews, but nothing ever came from them… Then there was my worst fear: what if my disability was the problem?”
Becca, Scope for Change campaigner

Everything we do will be underpinned by robust evidence and customer insight, and focus on delivering social change.

“Everything we do will be underpinned by robust evidence and customer insight, and focus on delivering social change.”
Scope
Our shops are a vital lifeline for generating income to deliver our work

And it’s not just about the money. Our shops are the face of Scope to thousands of people in their communities, a place where conversations about our work and mission happen.

We rely on our supporters to donate quality clothes, books, toys, bric-a-brac, furniture to our shops. And we also rely on our volunteers – put simply our shops could not operate without our dedicated volunteers, many of whom are disabled.

But we face huge challenges in this area. The environment is incredibly competitive with multiple charity shops battling against each other on every high street.

Additionally, we need to double our volunteer numbers. A tough ask when the charity retail sector is facing reduced levels of volunteer interest year on year.

So we have big plans for our shops over the next five years to ensure we have a sustainable source of income to finance our ambitions.

More money

We have an ambitious target to more than double our current annual profit from £3.3 million to £5.5 million by 2021/2022. We want the conversations with our customers to go further, to talk more about what we do and how they can support us to achieve our vision.

More shops

We plan to grow the number of shops from 220 to 250 by 2022. We will open 10 new shops and 20 of our new Home by Scope, furniture and electrical shops. The first Home by Scope shop opened in Northampton in July 2018, with four more to follow in 2018/19.

More digital

We will use digital technology to drive efficiency and improve systems so we’re even better at signing people up to Gift Aid, inducting and training our staff and volunteers, and moving stock around.

Our supporters

By 2022 we want to achieve more than 125,000 supporters and donors in addition to our 40,000 online community members and our 10,000 retail volunteers.

With our supporters, we will use our collective power to:

- Challenge inequality, disrupt the status quo and inspire change through hard hitting campaigns.
- Work together to share our stories, influence our networks, spread the word and create inspiring content that brings home the reason why we do what we do. We will work with digital partners and online influencers to remain at the forefront of communication and to extend our reach and voice.
- Connect with partners across the commercial and social business space to build alliances and influence, share expertise, increase reach and impact. We will be known as the partner of choice in driving social purpose through our business networks.
- Innovate in our income generation, extending beyond our philanthropic routes to driving commercial and social enterprise models that challenge the status quo and generate more income for our mission.
- Create an events and engagement platform that brings people closer to us and provides a way for them to join us in our ambitions. Together we are stronger and we will do all we can to welcome you into our family. Our events will articulate the change we want to see and play an integral role in driving equality for disabled people.

More people

We will continue to invest in our people and set up an expert volunteering team to help us recruit more volunteers and champion them as part of the Scope team.

More money

We have an ambitious target to more than double our current annual profit from £3.3 million to £5.5 million by 2021/2022. We want the conversations with our customers to go further, to talk more about what we do and how they can support us to achieve our vision.

More shops

We plan to grow the number of shops from 220 to 250 by 2022. We will open 10 new shops and 20 of our new Home by Scope, furniture and electrical shops. The first Home by Scope shop opened in Northampton in July 2018, with four more to follow in 2018/19.

More digital

We will use digital technology to drive efficiency and improve systems so we’re even better at signing people up to Gift Aid, inducting and training our staff and volunteers, and moving stock around.

By 2022, we want to achieve more than 125,000 supporters and donors in addition to our 40,000 online community members and our 10,000 retail volunteers.

With our supporters, we will use our collective power to:

- Challenge inequality, disrupt the status quo and inspire change through hard hitting campaigns.
- Work together to share our stories, influence our networks, spread the word and create inspiring content that brings home the reason why we do what we do. We will work with digital partners and online influencers to remain at the forefront of communication and to extend our reach and voice.
- Connect with partners across the commercial and social business space to build alliances and influence, share expertise, increase reach and impact. We will be known as the partner of choice in driving social purpose through our business networks.
This strategy isn’t just about what we will do to make change happen, it’s also about the people who deliver our work – our staff and volunteers. And how we will up our game to attract, retain and motivate the talent we need to deliver everyday equality.

We will create a culture based on our new values, where our people can flourish. We will work together in an environment that supports creativity, passion and growth. By investing in our people and supporting them to be the best they can be, we will be united in our commitment to achieving our mission.

Leading the field

One of our ambitions is to be an inclusive employer, leading the field in the employment of disabled people and supporting diversity in all its forms. We know we must lead by example on disability equality, acting as a role model for other employers. And we know we can do more.

We have a solid foundation to build upon. Our staff survey tells us that of our staff who declared themselves disabled, 84% are happy to disclose their impairment. This is well above the average for any charity and public sector organisation. We also know that our disabled staff are very positive about Scope as a place to work. We have taken the first step by moving to a fully accessible and inspiring work place. The contemporary facilities include a Changing Places toilet which is accessible to the local community as well as our staff and volunteers.

The next steps are to:
- Run a development programme for all managers to ensure they are confident in recruiting and supporting disabled colleagues.
- Provide a diversity and disability awareness programme as part of staff and volunteer inductions.
- Launch an apprenticeships and interns programme and a volunteer programme to attract and provide development opportunities.
- Revise our policies and procedures to remove any barriers to entering and staying in work.
- Push the boundaries in workforce planning and pilot new models of practice with both our own people and our external consultancy work.

Our people are at the heart of everything we do.

“Because of my disability, people are like ‘he can’t do this’, ‘he can’t do that’, and it hurts. I know what I want to be, and I know I can get my dream job.”

Azar, supported by Scope
We hold true to five core principles:

1. We recognise, value and act on disabled people’s knowledge and expertise based on their lived experience.
2. We work alongside disabled people with a variety of skills, support needs, ages and backgrounds to bring a richness of experiences.
3. We work together to make sure that everything we do is accessible.
4. We are open and honest about our limitations if we are not able to do something.
5. We make sure that disabled people feel confident and supported when working with us to achieve Scope’s vision.

Scope exists to lift the voices of disabled people and to work together with disabled people and their families to make sure our services and our campaigns deliver what we know disabled people need to provide everyday equality. We will continue to work tirelessly to improve disabled people’s experiences of working with us.

Our core values of pioneering, courageous, connected, open and fair are important to us. We encourage disabled people to challenge and collaborate at every opportunity, as it is only through challenge and teamwork that we can innovate and improve. We work hard to remain relevant to the needs of today and to be ready for the needs of tomorrow.

We are here to work together with disabled people and their families to shape a society that is equal, to help shape the stories, the aspirations, the struggles and the successes and to work together and with others to find solutions and support each other at times of need.

We share our insights and our experiences to inspire businesses, the media and creative industry, the government and the public to change the way they engage with disabled people. We will create equality for disabled people and we will do this together.

It starts when you step forward... join us and become a ‘Disability Gamechanger’.

Putting disabled people front and centre of all we do. The lived experience and expertise of disabled people, parents of disabled children and disabled people’s organisations will shape our work.

Starting Line customers sharing their experience

Disabled people told us they wanted advice from a source that felt like ‘they knew because they’d been there’. The best way to do this was by asking disabled people who had ‘been there’ to share their experiences. Joel, a former customer and graduate of our Starting Line employment service, returned to talk to new customers about his experience on the project, and how he benefited from it. He volunteered his time.

The session went well – key feedback from the participant was that the process was exciting, quick and simple.

As a result, we’ve rolled this out to all our Starting Line services. These sessions are well received by new customers.

Pair writing with disabled subject matter experts

Pair writing involves disabled people helping us to write copy for our website. A Scope content designer and a working-age disabled person sit down together to draft the content. This becomes the information and advice on our website – in this case about jobs, work and benefits.

Working like this ensures that our content reflects user needs and language, which makes it easier for our customers to find and understand. It also builds participants’ writing and communication skills and delivers reportedly increased self-confidence and self-esteem.

The new online content, designed alongside disabled people, is rated consistently higher by visitors than the old content. Importantly, the participants valued the opportunity to contribute.

Putting this into action

Measuring impact

To ensure our strategy, truly makes an impact through our day to day work, disabled people who have received our services helped us to develop a set of measures. Their input was vital in how we developed our Impact Assessment Framework. This shows how our disabled customers’ lived experience is directly influencing the way we work.

“I feel that [focus] groups like this are important to understand people’s perspectives on how well the project is doing in delivering its services. Very interesting” Scope Impact participant
Be part of our journey

Together we can take action to ensure that disabled people have fairness and equality. At home. At work. At school. In our communities.

Everyday equality. No less. And we won’t stop until it happens.

scope.org.uk/everyday-equality

Call 0808 800 3333 to let us know if you’d like this information in a format that’s accessible for you.

SC0034
Scope is a registered charity, number 208231.
Copyright Scope October 2018